As a senior citizen, I'm disappointed that the city does not provide a decent facility for senior citizens. The only senior center is in a rural area of Virginia Beach, a very small facility, and not accessible by public transportation. Since there is a recreation center in Bow Creek, the addition of a senior center is a perfect fit. The recreation centers in Virginia Beach cater to Families and kids and the younger adult population; putting a senior center in Bow Creek would give the elderly a place to gather and have events designed for the older population. For the size of Virginia Beach, it's about time to have a decent senior center.

I am Vice President of Business Development for the Dragas Companies, a Virginia Beach based apartment and condominium builder. We are actively seeking ways to smartly increase workforce housing in the city, in areas where development is expected and redevelopment can reignite old economic engines. Many of the urban shopping centers across the city are in need of rehabilitation, and as market conditions continue to change, land owners will begin to assess their viability as residential redevelopment opportunities.

The community SGA plan is an excellent way to encourage growth in areas of the city where the most resources currently exist, fulfilling our housing needs while preserving the rural heritage of the southern extents of VB.

Additionally, I live within the Resort Area SGA and have family ties to Oceanfront hotel properties. While the Oceanfront must remain well situated for continued growth of the all-important tourism industry, I am glad that in recent years, the City has understood that additional residential construction helps create year-round viability of restaurants and other businesses. Due to Navy restrictions, residential construction at the Oceanfront is limited to very few future parcels, and the city should establish plans to encourage as much as possible. Mixed use communities with year-round residents will help the tourism industry to also bleed into the spring and fall.

I am interested in joining the SGA or commercial-use focus groups and hope I can help represent the residential construction community.
